Preface

Doreen Kartinyeri was born at Raukkan in 1935 to Oscar and Thelma Kartinyeri. She was sent to the Fullarton Girls Home in Adelaide after the death of her mother in 1945. There she trained as a domestic servant and from the age of 13 worked for a number of years. During this time she required permission from the Protector of Aborigines to return home to Raukkan. She later moved to Point Pearce on the Yorke Peninsula where her life-long passion for Aboriginal family and community history commenced.

Two of Doreen's children, Klynton and Lydia, remember being taught how to weave and make feather flowers. It was Doreen's way of passing on Ngarrindjeri culture to her children while living at Point Pearce. "As a kid if you wanted to ask Mum a question you had to pick your time; if you expected a one word answer, playtime took a backseat because you got a history lesson instead. It didn't seem important to me as a child but as I get older I count myself extremely fortunate," recalls Klynton.

Dr Kartinyeri published a number of books which led to her being awarded an honorary doctorate from the University of South Australia. Her research has made an invaluable contribution to the Aboriginal community of South Australia by documenting genealogies, and through the establishment of the Family History Unit within the South Australian Museum. Her work also led to communications and connections with anthropologist Norman Tindale whereby he entrusted his extensive collections to the South Australian Museum.

Dr Kartinyeri, a well-respected Ngarrindjeri Elder, passed away in 2007. The genealogy books written by Dr Kartinyeri were always first and foremost for the families that they were written for, secondly for those from the Stolen Generations. Her contribution to Aboriginal family history has left an ongoing legacy.

Abstract

The Aboriginal Family History Unit at the South Australian Museum (SAM) has prepared a guide for family history researchers to the names, genealogies and data cards recorded by Norman B Tindale during the Harvard and Adelaide Universities, Board for Anthropological Research (BAR) expedition in South Australia 1938–1939. During this period, the expedition team interacted with Aboriginal people at Point McLeay, Point Pearce, Swan Reach, Koonibba, Port Augusta and Nullarbor. The second phase of this project added an additional 576 names to the 3000 names already indexed, from the Harvard and Adelaide Universities, Board for Anthropological Research 1938–1939 expeditions. This phase included additional, smaller expeditions that were undertaken to other areas within South Australia between 1923–1963.

The Board for Anthropological Research sponsored over forty anthropological expeditions to study Australian Aboriginal people in the five decades following its establishment in 1926. Although the work of the BAR was initially focused on physical anthropology, Tindale introduced the importance of collecting sociological data. These expeditions resulted in research across a range of fields, such as linguistics and the broader aspects of social and cultural anthropology. This included the documentation of songs, ceremony and social organisation.

Background

The AA338 Dr Norman Barnett Tindale and the AA346 Board for Anthropological collections held at the South Australian Museum Archive became widely known among Aboriginal communities during the 1980s due to research findings and publications by Ngarrindjeri historian, Dr Doreen Kartinyeri. The significance of these collections containing photographs, genealogies, personal data and cultural information relevant to individuals connected to the survey sites across Australia created enormous interest and sparked appeals for access.

In the course of her work, Dr Kartinyeri was the first Aboriginal person to undertake a formal investigation into these records, and by 1987, word had spread and the demand was so great that Tindale gave permission for the supply of photos, genealogies and associated records in his unpublished material to Aboriginal people on request.

In 1987, the Aboriginal Family History Project commenced at the South Australian Museum with the sole purpose to make the archival material available to Aboriginal family history researchers. In 1988, the Museum employed Dr Kartinyeri (already familiar with the records), followed by Neva Wilson and Barry Craig shortly after, to support her research and in developing publications, as well as to manage the increasing demand for access to the material.

In the 1990s, the Aboriginal Family History Project was renamed the Aboriginal Family History Unit and allocated more staff. Community workshops took place and copies of the photographs and genealogies supplied to State Museums, State Libraries and Aboriginal communities around Australia.

There has been an increase in applications for access to these records through the Aboriginal Family History Unit, currently managed by Ali Abdullah-Highfold and Shane Agius in the role of Family and Community History Consultants. More and more Aboriginal historians and family history researchers are acquainting themselves with the collections, viewing Tindale's journals, the genealogies, film, sound, language, maps, crayon drawings and school tests. These valuable resources are not only useful for family history purposes, helping to connect members of the Stolen Generation to their identity – family, community and Country, they are used for Native Title, reclaiming of lost languages, developing language dictionaries, community programs and exhibitions, documentaries, genealogy publications and biographies.

Introduction

The guide is primarily an index of names – the Name Index, and is available as a PDF on the SAM website. In addition to the Name Index, each of the original genealogies for South Australia 1938–1939 (Sheets 1–172 and 211–213) including Mount Davies 1963 (Sheets AN1–13), has been reproduced in RootsMagic, a genealogy software that can be made available to family history researchers as an app, or by other means. Its purpose is to provide information about the location of these records held in the South Australian Museum Archives and to assist Aboriginal people to link up with family and community. As well as a valuable tool for family history researchers, this resource can be utilised to grow family trees, incorporating successive generations into the future.

Warning and sensitivities

The guide and associated resource contains the names and photographs of people who have passed away. Viewers may find some of the annotations recorded on the genealogies to be offensive and hurtful. Language and classifications such as 'full blood', 'half-caste', 'quarter caste' and 'white' were often applied and are a reflection of the author's attitude and the period in which the expeditions took place. Please be aware that some of the information contained within these records is of a highly sensitive nature and may be distressing for family members.

Every effort has been made to record each individual's name and family relationships – transferred from each of the genealogies into RootsMagic family tree software, as Tindale recorded them during the Board of Anthropological Research, Harvard and Adelaide Universities South Australian expeditions 1938–1939. Anomalies and inconsistencies with information, including dates, names and relationships, appear from time to time between genealogy sheets and within data cards.

Key to Mapping Family Index Phase I and 2

Last Name / First Name

This index is a comprehensive list of Australian Aboriginal people recorded on the Genealogies and Data Cards. Sometimes traditional names were recorded, and the spelling of names can vary from between the Data Card and the Genealogies. All of the variations have been indexed to facilitate family history research.

Data Card

Each Australian Aboriginal Person had their own identifier that included a letter to indicate the expedition and then a number eg N1234. This helped to distinguish people with same name. Each Genealogy Sheet was given a number that was recorded on the Data Card. Phase I of the index covered the Harvard and Adelaide Universities, Board for Anthropological Research (BAR) expedition of 1938-1939. Phase 2 now includes smaller expeditions from 1923 – 1963.
